War On Enemy Shipping Reduces Axis Nations To Bare Necessities

LONDON, July 8 — The Germans have lost the battle of the Ruhr and are taking away all moveable equipment from the bomb-devastated industrial valley, the house of commons was told today by Dingle Mackintosh Foot, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of economic warfare.

He based his statement, Foot said, on recent information received by British authorities.

"It is an extremely significant fact," he said of the transfer by the Germans of equipment from the Ruhr, "because they show that they themselves know the battle of the Ruhr is lost."

Foot at the same time disclosed Britain and the United States, now making all important decisions on economic warfare jointly, presently are engaged in making a detailed examination of the resources of the European area where Allied invasion forces will land.

Invasion Survey

"For the last 12 months," he said, "our work in this direction has been mostly concerned with certain areas of the continent of Europe."

He revealed that the Axis in the last year at sea lost 30,000 tons of rubber, 5,000 tons of tin, 25,000 tons of edible oils and important quantities of tungsten and quinoline. Cargoes lost to the Axis while en route to Japan included heavy machinery, machine

French To Choose Own Government

Solemn Promise Made By Gen. Giraud Acting As "Servant, Not Leader"

WASHINGTON, July 8 — A solemn promise that the French people will be allowed to choose their own form of government as soon as France is liberated is contained in a statement of Gen. Henri Giraud's views made available by French sources in Washington today.

As the commander-in-chief of the French North African forces "entire," the first full day of military conferences with the American high command, his position concerning the future of France was made clear in the statement of his views.

Emphasizing that the people of France must be allowed to become "masters of their own destinies" after the war, Gen. Giraud's statement said: "I give the most solemn assurances to the people of France that their sacred right to choose their provisional government themselves will be fully safeguarded."

"I assure them that the conditions permitting them to make this choice in lawful order, and with their freedoms restored, will be guaranteed. I assure them that this situation will be created as soon as France has been liberated."

"I am the servant of the French people. I am not their leader."

"All Frenchmen who are with me, all of them, from myself to the last soldier of the army of victory, are servants of the people of France. Tomorrow we shall be servants of the provisional government which the people have freely chosen, and we shall deliver to it our powers."

These views of Gen. Giraud were considered significant in official circles in Washington in the light of reports that Fighting French political agents have been called upon to take an oath of allegiance to Gen. Charles De Gaulle as the "sole and legitimate" leader of the French.

These reports were denied by Fighting French sources as "fantastic." Nevertheless, information concerning them, including a copy of the text of the alleged oath, was delivered to a high ranking official of the American government.

Gen. Giraud, who arrived in Washington yesterday, is expected to confer again today with Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to President Roosevelt, Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and other American military and naval leaders.

The chief purpose of Giraud's visit is understood to be the drafting of final plans for equipping 300,000 French colonial troops with modern American weapons of warfare.

CHICAGO WINS PRAISE FOR FINE JAP TREATMENT

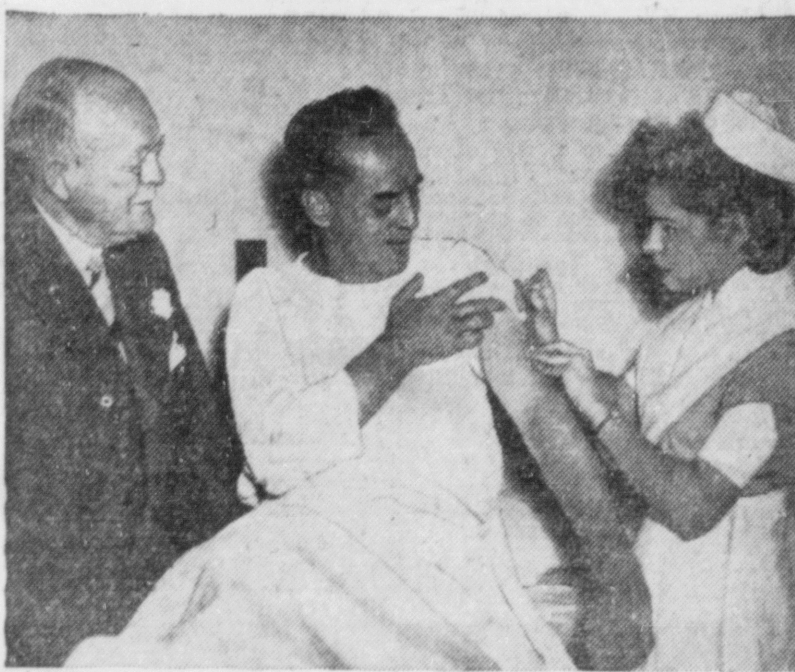

CHICAGO, July 8 — Chicago won praise today for being the nation's warmest and most generous host to the thousands of American citizens of Japanese ancestry who have been sent throughout the country by the war relocation authority.

The praise came from Elmer L. Shirrell, midwest WRA director, who said that nearly 2,500 Japanese-Americans have found work and home in the Chicago area. He praised both employers and the public for having absorbed Japanese-Americans with a minimum of "fuss and friction."

LOS ANGELES, July 8 — Despite his censors, Lt. Col. Richard I. Jones, captured by the Nipponese in the fall of Corregidor, was able to tell how he was being treated in an enemy prison camp, it was learned today.

"I'm living the same kind of life as Bruno," he declared in a message to his wife, Mrs. Betty Jones, of Beverly Hills, on a shortwave broadcast from Tokyo. "Bruno" is the Jones' dog.

WLB To Refuse General Wage Hoist for Million Men In Shipbuilding

WASHINGTON, July 8 — Members of the War Labor Board indicated today that the majority of the board would turn down the request of 1,100,000 shipbuilding workers for a general wage increase.

A public hearing was held yesterday for review of the nation-wide stabilization plan for the shipbuilding industry. Labor members under the leadership of John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Union endeavored to by-pass the rigid "Little Steel" formula and obtain a nine percent cost of living adjustment.

Despite the fact that the unions asked for "roll-back" or "a raise," the opinion of the board at the conclusion of the hearing was to deny the general increase, and to iron out some of the inequities and inequalities which have made the turn-over in the industry alarmingly heavy.

Industry members of the Shipbuilders Council of America declared that the demands of the unions were unmistakably a violation of the "hold the line" policy.

"Shipyard wages have increased 55.1 percent since January 1941," an industry spokesman declared. "In the same interval a national rise in the cost of living was only 23.1 percent."

In further rebuking the statements of the CIO, the A. F. of L. and several independent unions for higher wages, the industry spokesman added that "the Department of Labor statistics clearly indicate that shipyard wages are already the highest in the entire industrial field."

Every step in manufacture today is controlled by the federal government. It has control over manpower (personnel), contracts, materials, sales, prices, deliveries and even consumers and use.

You won't get that new automobile, that new ironer, those new plastics until somebody says "O. K. boys, . . . go to work." And that's what the senate committee wants to find out. . . . who's going to say it and what plans are being made. They can be made today as well as next year or two years from now.

Thought for the day: World planning begins at home.

TAINTED FOOD FATAL

FORT WAYNE, Ind., July 8 — One war worker was dead and 15 others were in hospitals today, apparently because of tainted food. The workers became ill soon after eating in a restaurant of the General Electric company of Fort Wayne, where they were employed. DEMAND GROWS FOR SHIFT OF JAP CONTROL

Federal Agency Rapped For Alleged Bungling At Alien Centers

CONGRESS PLANS ACTION

Senate And House Members Favor Army Handling 130,000 Nips

WASHINGTON, July 8 — Growing congressional demands to turn the Japanese evacuee problem over to the army were seen today as members promised to take up the issue immediately after congress reconvenes in September.

Irritated at "inefficiency and bungling" of the War Relocation Authority in handling the nearly 130,000 Japanese American citizens and Aliens in the relocation centers, both senate and house members outlined action.

Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (R) N. J., a member of the Dies subcommittee investigating un-American activities, angrily attacked the WRA as a "silly, social experiment," and said he would introduce a bill in the house to give the army full control of the problem.

Parnell said that Sens. McKellar (D) Tenn., and Revercomb, (R) W. Va., both had stated on the senate floor that such action should be taken at once.

Meanwhile, WRA Chief Dillon Myer pointed out, however, that the army had been approached but "turned thumbs down" on the proposal to take over the WRA's activities.

Despite Myer's assertion, Rep. Herman P. Eberhart (D) Pa., another Dies committee member, contended that "many people have expressed the opinion that the administration of these camps has been weak and lax in the exercise of control."

In denying this claim, Myer admitted that "some mistakes have been made" due to the agency's "inexperience" but those have been remedied, he said, by a change of certain members of the personnel. "Things generally are in good order," said the WRA chief. "Today we have as good a staff in WRA as in any government agency and we are getting better as we go along."

CHINESE JAILED TO "SAVE" THEM FROM JAPANESE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8 — Authorities at the Sharp Park Immigration detention camp near San Francisco said today they anticipated no further trouble, following a threatened riot between Japanese enemy aliens and Chinese nationals.

The Japanese succeeded not only in breaking up a celebration among the Chinese, but actually caused the Chinese to be placed behind bars in the Alameda county jail.

A platoon of heavily armed soldiers appeared at the height of the threatened melee, but no blows were struck and the soldiers were used only to transport the Chinese off to jail for their own protection.

The trouble started when the camp's 47 Chinese, virtually all seamen awaiting deportation, put up a placard and the Chinese flag in honor of "Seven Seven Day" — the day Japan invaded China.

The placard, which bore the legend "Seven Years of Victory," then was torn down by one of the 172 Japanese in the camp.

What happened then was explained by Irving F. Wixon, district director of the U. S. immigration service:

"They appeared to be in a belligerent mood, and I decided a show of force would be the best preventive measure, so I asked the army to step in. When they appeared the situation soon quieted down, and we then ordered the Chinese sent to the Alameda jail for their own safety."

Nelson Hails Allied Production Boost As Death Knell For Axis

TORONTO, July 8 — In one of the most optimistic speeches of his career, WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson today declared that the trend of World War II is leading "inexorably" to a United Nations victory.

Hailing the vastly increased production of arms and munitions in Canada as well as in the United States, Nelson told members of the Canadian club:

"The trend is inexorable. It points relentlessly to the just and terrible punishment which the outraged world will visit on the Fascist aggressors."

Nelson declared that enemy nations have either reached or are approaching their production peak, and their output of war materiel is being sharply impaired due to "wholesale destruction of plants from the air."

Great Reserve Strength

He urged that the public bear in mind that recent Allied successes on the battlefronts have been accomplished despite the fact that "only a relatively small proportion of our output has as yet been brought to bear directly on the enemy."

"What we have achieved so far has been achieved with a fraction of our potential fighting strength," Nelson declared. "The next step is to make the enemy feel the tremendous weight of the total output of our war production machine."

Nelson based his optimistic statements on production figures, which, he declared, now total almost three times the Axis output. He revealed that since the outbreak of war U. S. and Canada have produced:

115,000 airplanes; 175,000 large caliber guns; 1,500,000 machine guns; 6,000,000 rifles and submachine guns; 200,000,000 rounds of artillery ammunition (excluding ammunition for naval guns); 25,000,000,000 rounds of small ammunition; 20,000,000 tons of merchant shipping; 2,000,000 tons of naval ships.

"Voice Of Doom"

"These figures speak to the world in a big voice," Nelson asserted. "And if the Nazi and Jap warlords are not completely insane, they will recognize that the voice is the voice of doom."

Nelson warned that the enemy should not take too much comfort from the "spasmodic strikes and riots" in recent days.

"There is a tendency to exaggerate the implications of these disturbances," he said, citing that the "great bulk" of war producers, both managers and workmen "have not been diverted from the essential tasks."

The WPB chairman outlined the objectives of the production program in the following words:

"We plan to produce an umbrella of safety and put it over the heads of the fighting men of the United Nations. We plan to lay down a barrage of safety before them as they advance. We plan to carry them safely through all waters of the globe on their way to the fighting fronts. We cannot satisfy ourselves that we have done enough, until we have done everything that we can do to conserve their young lives for the peacetime world to come."

CAMP PAPER RAPS CIVILIANS AS "SHIRKERS"

MADISON, Wis., July 8 — Absenteeism among civilian instructors at Truxfield field, army radio school at Madison, drew censure today from the camp's newspaper, Radio Post.

In an editorial the newspaper pointed out that "there are ugly rumors afloat concerning the practice of some instructors on this field of becoming conveniently ill every now and then." The editorial added:

"The instructor who stays away from his job unless he is really ill . . . is cheating the government, and that means his 135,000,000 fellow countrymen. He is cheating the student who looks to him for guidance."

SHORT'S PONY THIEVES NABBED

Youths Who Bilked County Auditor Found With Carnival Troupe

Two Xenia youths who sold a stolen pony to Auditor Forrest Short and then fled with $40 in cash were taken into custody Wednesday at Franklin, O., where they were appearing with the Curly Brothers' carnival. Arrest was made by Franklin police after Greene county authorities had asked that they look for them with the show.

The boys, who are brothers named Groom, are both on suspended sentences to the Ohio Industrial school, Lancaster, and both are expected to be sent there to serve their terms. Local authorities are not expected to have a chance to try them for their hoax of the auditor, the pony theft charges still pending against them in Xenia.

The pony was claimed by A. E. Chlenoweth of Xenia the day after Mr. Short gave the boys $40 for it. They fled when following the auditor in their car to the sheriff's office to prove their identity and that the pony belonged to them.

Auditor Short does not expect to recover his $40.

CHUNGKING, July 8 — Chinese troops have driven Japanese forces from the town of Menting on the Burma-Yunnan province border and the enemy is retreating westward.

By International News Service

Japanese outposts from the Southwest Pacific to the Aleutians in the north were under increased pressure from Allied forces today as Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced new successes in the Solomons.

A communique disclosing two new American landings on New Georgia island in the Solomons, near the important enemy air base at Munda, was accompanied by announcement that at least nine and possibly 11 Jap cruisers and destroyers were sunk by American warships in the historic battle of Kula Gulf, near Munda, against a loss of only one American cruiser, the U. S. S. Helena.

Less than two hours were required for ships of the United States South Pacific fleet to dispose of the Japanese war vessels in the battle of the Kula Gulf, the first full story of the historic clash disclosed today.

Four or five of this number — all speedy destroyers — were sent to the bottom in the first five minutes of combat.

The balance were destroyed or damaged in but 15 minutes of shell-fire, and the balance of the two hours which the battle occupied were spent merely in tracking down and sending to cover the badly-battered remnants of Japan's flotilla.

Victory for Halsey

It was a striking American victory and one very much in line with the precepts of Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., who presides over this South Pacific fleet command. "Bull" Halsey, as he is known to officers and men alike, has one doctrine.

It is:

"Blast the hell out of them."

It is possible now to make plain the one important angle of the combat over and above the fact the enemy lost a lot of warships. The Japanese — and not the Americans — were mousetrapped. They went into Kula Gulf from the south, presumably through narrow Blackett Strait, while U. S. ships had the advantage of northerly positions, with a wide open passage for manoeuvre.

Information indicates there may have been some opinion to the contrary in America. In other words, that perhaps the ships of Halsey's fleet were on the bottom side of the Kula Gulf wingglass while the Japs had the advantage of top positions.

Two More Landings On New Georgia Isle Disclosed By Gen. MacArthur

his tactics aren't as well known at home as they should be.

Munda in Danger

With its naval support shattered, the allied menace to Munda appeared greatly increased as allied bombers pounded supporting Jap bases in the Bougainville island area to the northwest. Forty-five tons of bombs were dropped on the Kahili airdrome and squadrons of allied planes blasted other airbases and harbors sheltering Jap warships, in the Bougainville area. Enemy installations on Kolombangara island, just north of New Georgia, also were heavily assaulted from the air.

The Japs retaliated with a strong attack on captured Rendova island, next to New Georgia, by a large formation of bombers and 56 Zeros. But allied fighter patrols broke up the enemy attack and shot down three bombers and nine Zeros. Only one allied plane was lost.

Allied bombers also swarmed over Jap territory in New Guinea and hurled 106 tons of bombs on enemy-held Mubo, 10 miles south of the Jap base at Salamaua, menaced by American and Australian ground troops. Other planes strafed enemy advanced positions in support of the allied ground patrols.

There was no official comment on a Tokyo claim that Japanese troops inflicted heavy casualties in a surprise attack Monday at the rear of advancing Yanks and Australians near Salamaua.

Today's report from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters, together with the previous announcement of bombardment of Jap-held Kiska in the Aleutians indicated to Washington observers possibility of an all-out drive against all enemy outposts in the Pacific preliminary to a final assault on Nippon itself.

In Russia, where the current German offensive roared into its fourth day, Soviet troops launched strong counterattacks aimed at wiping out the only Nazi gains in the Belgorod sector, where the Germans had captured several villages.

Counter Claim Made

Countering Moscow claims that 30,000 Nazi troops were slain and 1,539 tanks and 649 German planes were destroyed in the first three days of the current battles, the Berlin radio quoted the German high command as listing 400 Red army tanks and 193 Soviet planes destroyed in the Belgorod sector alone.

The Nazi-controlled Paris radio said the Russians were sending in wave after wave of tanks and quoted a Berlin military spokesman as saying the ferocity of the fighting between Orel and Belgorod has reached the intensity of last year's battles in Russia.

The Germans were using gliders to bring up reinforcements to the blazing front.

In the allied air war against Nazi Europe, the British air ministry announced new raids on objectives in northern France and the low countries by medium and light bombers and fighter planes of the RAF, and an Italian communiqué said two more points in Sicily were attacked by allied bombers.

In London, it was disclosed that small forces of RAF bombers—usually Mosquito planes—have been carrying out unannounced nightly raids on Germany for the last few weeks, harassing defenses and seriously affecting morale on the German home front.

Reuters reported a German news broadcast saying an Anglo-American battle fleet including two battleships of the King George class and several American cruisers and aircraft carriers had left Gibraltar and were steaming east in the Mediterranean.

STEWART MARTIN WINS PLACE IN ARMY SCHOOL

It is Private Stewart Martin now, but at the end of a 72-week schooling in engineering at the University of Cincinnati it will be Lieutenant Stewart Martin. A degree will also be added to his name when he comes out of the army.

And all because one of Uncle Sam's bookkeepers tried to pay Martin for four months of service in the army when he had only one month due him.

Young Martin told his commanding officer he had only one month's pay coming, so the officer started to check his service record. He found that Martin had been recommended for an engineering school, but that through some hitch he had not been assigned there.

Taking into consideration the youth's honesty, the officer recommended that he be sent to a school at once.

So today he is training at the University of Cincinnati, one of the leading engineering schools in the middlewest. The 72-week course is the same as a two-year course. After graduation the youth will be commissioned and an engineering degree will be his.

Martin took his basic training at Fort Bragg, and was sent to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where he was in charge of pigeons. He loved his work with the birds, but the engineering schooling means much more in post-war life.

The youth, who was 19 in December, has two brothers in service, Lieutenant Hildeburn, Jr., of the Marines, and Seaman First Class Clark of the navy. All are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Hildeburn Martin, 129 West Mill street.

of disloyal Japanese in the relocation centers will begin within the next few months.

Meanwhile, Rep. Karl Mundt (R) S. D., envisioned "a lot of little Tokyos" in rural America when loyal Japs are released from the relocation areas for farm work.

He expressed a fear that the Japanese would concentrate in the farm areas much as they had done on the Pacific coast and that it would cause disturbance among the Midwestern people.

Myer pointed out that community acceptance of the Japs was one of WRA's headaches and gave as an example the state of Arizona where no more Japs will be located, he said, due to disapproval of the state's citizens.

"There are some cases where local sentiment convinces us that they are not wanted," he said, "and they will not be sent there."

HOPE DARE ASKS DIVORCE FROM "DIXIE" DAVIS

LOS ANGELES, July 8—What began as one of the strangest romances in the era of the New York mob—the love of the red-haired showgirl, Hope Dare, for the gangster mouthpiece, J. Richard (Dixie) Davis—crashed today on the rocks of matrimonial discord.

In divorce proceedings filed here, Mrs. Davis, the former "Toast of Broadway," charged that her husband's unspecified cruelty brought about their separation.

Mrs. Davis asked $200 monthly alimony, telling the court that Davis, who once earned fabulous legal fees as an attorney for the late gangster, Dutch Schultz, has an income of $250 a week from several local enterprises.

These include, she said, an ice cream manufacturing business, a malt shop, and an interest in a road show called, "The Ball of Fire."

The couple was married in Nyack, N. Y., August 1, 1938.

Dixie's sweetheart during the height of the gangster era, Hope arranged a hideout in Philadelphia for the former attorney when he was being sought in the then New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's racket-busting crusade.

Finally arrested in a Philadelphia apartment with Hope, Dixie obtained leniency by returning to New York to testify as a witness against James J. Hines, Tammany leader, who was convicted of traffic with racketeers.

Hope was released but Dixie served a six-month jail term and was discharged from law practice in New York.

They were married on his release from jail and came west.

JEAN SEEKS DIVORCE

HOLLYWOOD, July 8—Film Actress Jean Parker will go into superior court today to get a divorce from her radio announcer-husband H. Dawson Sanders, on grounds that he caused her "grievous mental suffering." The couple, married two years ago, reached a property settlement out of court.

tools and engineering components.

"A very interesting phenomenon" today, he said, is that the Germans are making strenuous efforts to increase steel production in France, Belgium, Luxembourg and elsewhere.

"German production," he continued "is not moving to more remote districts. It is naturally being compelled to move in our direction."

Foot disclosed that since the occupation by the Allies of North Africa 700,000 tons of Axis shipping have been sunk and 300,000 tons seriously damaged.

Enemy Hard Hit

"There can be no doubt that this war on enemy shipping... has reduced the tonnage at Germany's disposal to a bare minimum needed to meet the most essential military and economic requirements."

Then he added: "In the final defeat of the Axis our traditional weapon of economic pressure once again will prove one of the most decisive factors."

Noting the recent intensive mobilization of manpower in Germany and comparing it with a similar measure by the Reich in 1918, Foot said:

"It is remarkable that they need to repeat the same measure today when they have 1,500,000 prisoners of war and several millions of imported workers from occupied countries."

"The extreme shortage of manpower is due to two causes: losses on the eastern front and the combined effort of our bombing and blockade."

He declared that the R.A.F. had spotted and identified nine out of every 10 vessels attempting to run the blockade.

AN AIRPLANE COLLECTION

THERE'S a whole lot in this war work besides the pay. A fine illustration was given the other day in an airplane plant at Linden, N. J.

As a naval fighting plane was coming off the assembly line, an electrical worker noticed a penny on the floor and picked it up. It looked to him like a good luck token, so he pasted it on the plane. A woman worker beside him liked the idea, and promptly pasted a quarter alongside of it. Other workers took notice, and followed suit, and soon they were coming forward by hundreds and finally thousands to give similar expression to their good will. From the first pennies it grew to dimes and quarters and then to dollar bills, until the whole exterior of the plane was covered, and there were several oil cans full of money. One worker with three sons in the navy, pasted on a $20 bill. The total figured up to $5,256 for the Navy Relief Society.

What a gesture! What good will and love of country it signified! Assuredly the hearts of these war workers, in a thousand factories, are in their work.

RIGHT TO CRITICISE

THE virtues of baseball and a sporting spirit shine with even greater luster in war time. Sergeant John F. Huth, American newspaperman in North Africa, tells of a Frenchman watching with much interest an American baseball game with all the trimmings.

"You Americans get things done and still have time to play," he observed admiringly. "But why do they call the referee all those names, and why doesn't he order them away?"

The newspaper man explained that it was all a part of the game, and that both the players and the spectators had a right to make any comments they wanted to, as long as they didn't use a ball bat to back up their indignation.

"Ah, Europe needs something of that!" sighed the Frenchman. "But it may be long before we can adopt the same techniques." And as he said that, Europe's everlasting wars seemed to grow a little clearer. If the Europeans would just play ball, literally and figuratively, they might by-pass an awful lot of trouble.

The latest American liquor reports indicate a three-years supply, provided the drinkers sip it slower and use more water.

A salute to Lieut. Charles B. Hall of Brazil, Ind., Negro air pilot who shot down a German fighter over Sicily last week.

If there isn't much in the papers now except war, don't blame the editors—they didn't start it.

Tip to Washington wranglers: Pipe down, gents, and get on the job.

Congress Fears for Health Of Overcrowded Washington Many Residents Now Dwell Amidst "Slum" Conditions

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

CONGRESS IS seriously worried over health conditions in Washington. The house of representatives committee on the District of Columbia's affairs has a health sub-committee which issued a report on the subject the other day, and it threw an undoubted scare into the ranks of the legislators on Capitol Hill.

The investigators declared plainly that a "disastrous epidemic" threatens from the present situation. The idea shocks the lawmakers on general principles and they obviously do not fancy the notion of being themselves in the midst of such an outbreak.

Mostly their own bunch are pretty comfortably quartered, but the investigator committee members warn them that a city of undiscriminating germs, once on the rampage, may be very difficult to confine exclusively to the slums.

The town has grown, since the war started, at a rate that no enumerator has been able to keep accurate track of.

To be sure, it has spread far into what previously were its suburbs, in Virginia, Maryland and even as far away as Pennsylvania. This belt today, however, is about as badly crowded as the central area, and transportation, in and out, has become nearly a problem impossible to solve.

The growth not only has been enormous, but it has been so rapid that the community's population probably at least has doubled in a decade of years.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
By DREW PEARSON

GAP WIDENING

WASHINGTON — Worst long range problem worrying Administration leaders during the hectic closing days of Congress was the ever widening gap between factions of the American people similar to that which preceded the Fall of France.

In France, a labor government had its own way to such extent under Blum that public reaction veered in the opposite direction, labor was in the public dog-house and reactionaries were in the saddle. Labor became bitter, sulky, uncooperative, while big French business had its sway.

Neither side would cooperate. Both hated each other. So France fell.

Today, in the U. S. A., public reaction against labor hit the full swing of the pendulum with the anti-strike bill. Labor had enjoyed the largest degree of power under Roosevelt ever achieved by American unions in their entire history. Now, as in France, labor is in the national dog-house.

Whether it remains there is the big question; also whether labor becomes sulky, bitter and uncooperative as in France. Upon the ability of both sides to cooperate, to see the other side's viewpoint is going to depend a great many things in this country—not only winning the war, but the kind of government we have after the war is over.

WAR PROFITS

The War Production Board has just made a study of certain war industries, the result of which is not going to help labor's mood. The WPB shows the profits of airplane companies from war contracts, which even after deducting taxes, are enormous. These profit figures are based upon invested capital.

For instance, North American Aviation which suffered a strike and seizure of its California operation by the Government, made 51.06 percent profit in 1941 after paying taxes. Before paying taxes its profits were 134.53 percent. North American's 1940 profits were even higher—57.33 percent after deducting taxes.

Consolidated Aircraft, another big company, made the gigantic profit of 94 percent in 1941 after paying taxes. Boeing, which turns out bombers, made 25 percent; Curtiss-Wright 41.9 percent; and Douglas 51 percent. All these were after paying taxes. Consolidated, incidentally, made 309 percent before paying taxes.

Bell Aircraft, which is building a big bomber plant in Georgia, made 36 percent in 1941; Sperry Gyroscope 37.9 percent; Ryan Aeronautical 38 percent. Wright Aeronautics, which the Truman Committee charged with manufacturing faulty engines despite government inspectors' opposition, made the juicy profit of 45.7 percent in 1941 and 250 percent before deducting taxes.

These lush war profits, taken together with Congressional adoption of the Ruml tax, plus Congressional veto of the $25,000 salary ceiling, plus current talk of a sales tax, is not going to help lessen the rift between capital and labor, already increased by the coal mine anti-strike bill controversies.

Note: Labor leaders didn't announce it, but on the day after Congress overrode the anti-strike veto, they launched plans to have every worker in the country register so as to be able to vote in 1944.

DIET AND HEALTH

Do Not Handle Sick, Stray Dogs

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE HEAR from several sources that the stray dog situation has created a condition of alarm in some communities. If the stray dog situation is as bad elsewhere as it is in my own locality, I don't wonder that it might be the cause of concern. Owners who cannot get meat or cannot afford meat or dog feed and are too kind hearted to do away with the dogs simply dump them out some place. The Union Depot in my home town has had a succession of stray dogs sleeping in the lobby for the past six months.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

A general practitioner in a smaller town nearby says that there is really an epidemic of hysteria over hydrophobia on account of the stray dog situation and suggests that a word from a physician or public health official would help to clarify the situation. He says that he knows of more than 50 people who are taking the Pasteur treatment as the result of having been near two pups—and the pups did not have hydrophobia.

Hydrophobia Rare Disease
Two or three things can be said very definitely. In the first place, hydrophobia is a rare disease even among dogs. Just because a dog is a stray or nervous or had tempered is no reason to think that he is carrying hydrophobia. It is even rarer in human beings.

Only about 30 percent of dogs who are actually bitten by another mad dog develop rabies. And if 100 people were actually bitten by a rabid dog so that the virus entered the skin, only about 10 percent of them would become infected.

In the second place, in order for infection to occur the skin must be broken and infective material from the dog's saliva enter the wound. The skin, of course, is usually broken by the dog's bite. But here again there is a sort of preventive instituted by Nature, because when the saliva is heavily infected, the dog has usually reached the paralytic stage so that his jaw muscles are paralyzed and he cannot bite.

Avoid Petting Sick Dogs
Some people have exposed themselves by petting a sick dog when they have an open cut and the dog's saliva has dripped on this cut. Here is another piece of common sense which points toward prevention, which is; do not handle stray, sick dogs. In fact, do not handle a sick dog at all even if it is your own until you know what is the matter with it.

Still another piece of comfort is that even if infection occurs in a human being, prevention is pretty certain with the Pasteur treatment. This treatment can be begun even several days or weeks after the bite has occurred and still be perfectly effective. A full course of this treatment reduces the possibility of the disease developing in a person who has been bitten by a mad dog from 100 percent, as mentioned above, to less than 1/2 of 1 percent.

Local treatment of the wound is also advisable—opening it up, draining it and cauterizing it.

Danger Minimized
This is not meant to minimize a hazard in a foolish way. Naturally the stray dog should be handled by the public health authorities and probably in the present state of the dog food problem it is humane to do away with them. But with our present scientific knowledge, the actual danger can reasonably be minimized.

The proper procedure in anyone who is exposed to a bite of a dog which may be rabid is to have the dog sent to a veterinary, killed, and the brain examined under the microscope. This certainly determines whether the animal has hydrophobia or not. After that there is time to decide whether to take the Pasteur treatment or not.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
J. S.: Is it in any way harmful to eat fish? I have been told it was an indication of cancer.

Answer: No, it is not harmful and it is not an indication of cancer.

C. F.: I have a polypus in my nasal passage. My encyclopedia states that a polyp may be malignant, or cancerous, in character. Is this true, and is it serious enough to warrant a specialist for its removal, and if removed, is it apt to recur?

The encyclopedia is only partially right. Very few polyps are cancerous, and almost none in the nose. They are due to chronic infection and if the symptoms are sufficiently troublesome, that is the best guide as to whether one should be removed or not.

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT
"DUCK!" YELLED Curley.
As the cutter held its course between the speedboat and the dark hull of the submarine, the two men slid down while hell broke over them. The tearing, crashing thunder of splintering prow and shattering glass, the stunning impact of whining lead against steel made an eternity of the five-second passage through the range of submarine gun fire! Then strangely they felt a ringing silence and the racing cutter beneath them again.

Curley slid upward and grabbed the wheel with his left hand while the Mexican rose more slowly, shaking a bloody head. His grin was broad and dazed. "We go through battle, eh, senor?"

"You said it," Curley was cutting the engine down as he awkwardly strove to swing the boat around, his gaze searching for the speedboat. His right shoulder sagged, his arm hung useless, but he seemed unaware of it.

The Mexican's head was clearing. He mopped the blood from his face with the corner of his coat and shot a glance into the dashboard mirror. "Our luckee day, senor," he cried. "The cut is from glass and not from bullet." He grabbed the wheel with fervor.

Cold perspiration beaded Curley's upper lip as he grinned back at the guard. "You're a good Joe," he said. His gaze turned back to the speedboat, and he muttered grimly, "Are you game to rise and fight again? They're heading back for the sub. If we could keep 'em away once more, the other cutters might be back."

The dark eyes of the two men met. In both was the knowledge that their fantastic good fortune could not withstand a second testing. The guard drew a ragged breath.

"Hokay, senor."

The cutter leaped forward, spray rising in white sheets about its battered prow. It tore into the wide angle of water between the speedboat and the submarine.

Curley, watching the angle narrow, was conscious of the sweep of cold breeze whipping past, of the bright Mexican sun dazzling the water before them. In the high excitement he was conscious of his surging love for these things of warmth and motion and life.

The cutter was drawing abreast of the speedboat now. Across the patch of blue water came the drifting sound of Jean's voice, the violent wave of her arm.

"No!" she was screaming. "No—Curley! Don't!"

Curley's eyes struggled to focus on the misty, shifting blur that was Halfway back to the mainland.

her face. Then he clenched his teeth against the pain in his chest. "Go on," he muttered to the guard beside him.

At this moment, just as the guard set his course for the final run of interference, came the first faint rumble of distant engines.

"The cutters!" yelled Curley. He twisted around to scan the blurring outlines of the island before desperate last hope died. There was no sign of the boats, even while the rumble increased.

And then the wild yell of the guard as the cutter tore into its deadly gamut.

But this yell was of victory. Like the lifting of a horrible mirage, the sub-machine gun had disappeared from the deck of the sub. Even as the cutter grazed unscathed, three members of the crew were scrambling frantically after the fun into the bowels of the submerging monster.

The speedboat raced ahead in an angry curve, but the cutter slowed its pace.

"What under the—" Curley was shouting dizzily when his answer roared into view. Two coast patrol planes, dropping low, dipped through the white clouds above them. As they watched, the planes circled like bright-eyed eagles above the spot where the submarine had submerged. Dropping objects glinted in the morning sun—the blue waters beneath rose in high bowls of spray as roaring detonations lifted both cutter and speedboat in vicious jerks.

Curley's laughter rang out as he crashed with each jerk against the dashboard. "Caramba! This is more like it!" His eyes, bright with pain, turned back to the speedboat, racing for its life now. "Keep—after 'em!" he shouted.

The guard opened the cutter's engine wide. "Ya voy!" he yelled.

As they roared after the speedboat, the gray hulls of the two cruising cutters rounded the point, and swung into the chase. It was a matter of minutes. Inexorably the three cutters closed in on the desperate speedboat, forced it to a stop, ringed its occupants with a circle of automatics.

Curley directed the loading of the prisoners into the cutters. He gestured for the white-faced Parkinsons to be taken aboard the second cutter.

"You can bring home the grand prizes, amigos," he called gayly to the stern-faced guards. "They're plenty hot tamales, but I don't like their flavor. I'll take the little chili bean."

The guards grinned fraternally while Jean was helped into the cutter beside Curley.

Halfway back to the mainland.

the planes dipped low over the three cutters in farewell salute, and droned off. Silently both guards and prisoners watched the slick of brown oil gathering on the blue surface of the water behind them. Jean shuddered and drew closer into the protection of Curley's left arm.

"Are you sure you're not hurt?" she worried.

"Me!" His gay laugh was derisive. "Ridiculous, mi queridissima, on a morning like this. See the golden sun above us, the white clouds, the fresh breeze—they were made for honeymoons. Today we—"

She turned smiling—to see that he had fainted.

Through a dull red fog of pain, Curley fought his way to consciousness. He was in a wide, canopied bed in a spacious, darkened room. Somewhere a melodeon was playing. And presently a thin, sweet voice crooned the Spanish song.

A hand, cool and slender, was laid upon his forehead. His fevered gaze moved vaguely over the broad forehead bending above him with its sweep of blond hair, the wide blue eyes. It was a tender aura about the delicately blurred line of cheek and chin. Voices murmured about him... The doctor's strong finger was on his pulse. Steve Landis was patting his good shoulder. His words drifted crazily. "... a good job, Chancellor..." "Rosa's spike-heeled shoes approached in running taps, her plangent face swam before him, the glint of laughter in her black eyes. "You like my music, eh?"

Night came. And day again. And the blurred lines of the room steadied. He saw it was the master bedroom of the hacienda. With the broad chests of drawers he had burglarized, and the bright pots of flowers in the deep windows. And sitting on the other side of the bed in which he was lying was Jean, the sunshine a patina of gold on her blue dress and her blond hair.

"You—are beautiful," his lips formed unsteadily.

She leaned forward. She held his face between her cool, slender hands and kissed him on the mouth. "They've told me about everything," she said, and there was a warm, quiet ecstasy in her voice. "You are strong and brave and wonderful—and I love you."

"You will marry me today?" His voice was a hoarse, broken thread.

Her wide eyes laughed. "Not today," she whispered. "But—There's always mañana!"

A flash of spirit burned through his drugged eyes. "Caramba!" he muttered.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO
Appeal to council to buy more traffic lights and make repairs on the light at Mingo and Main streets was made by Mayor W. B. Cady, who urged also a survey of traffic to control speeding on the city streets.

Governor Dave announced the appointment of Meeker Terwilliger, 238 East Main street, as judge of the court of Common Pleas of Pickaway county to fill the vacancy left by the death of Judge Joseph W. Adkins.

It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year in which the higher and finer phases of creative expression may clamor for constructive form in a world of reality rather than ideals. Beauty, charm, emotional as well as physical and psychical forces are under splendid impetus for accomplishment.

A child born on this day may be richly endowed with artistic, musical and intellectual abilities and be idealistic and perhaps psychic or mystical. Its personal charm and magnetism assure a delightful life.

Charles Lanman, 35, of New Holland, was slowly recovering at his home from a fractured knee and injuries to his hip suffered in a 25-foot fall from the roof of a barn on the W. C. French farm.

John C. Goeller Jr. was one of 200 students graduated at the training camp at Plattsburg, New York. He was recommended for a commission and was to be sent to an officers training school.

Miss Florence Warner of Circleville, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Snyder and children and Miss Mary Snyder of Kingston motored to Camp Sherman and visited Herbert Snyder.

Searchlights used by anti-aircraft crews are said to be so strong that a newspaper can be read by their light 12 miles away. Scientists have not yet, however, invented a searchlight powerful enough to detect truth in Nazi propaganda.

GEORGE RAFT ADDED

George Raft has been added to the cast of "Air Force," the powerful war drama which Cecil B. DeMille will produce on the Radio Theatre, Monday, July 12, at 9 p. m. over the Columbia network. As previously announced, Harry Carey, veteran actor of the stage and screen, will appear in a stellar role.

The heroic story of a bomber crew aboard a Flying Fortress, affectionately dubbed the "Mary Ann," begins the fated morning of Pearl Harbor. The crew chief of the bomber is an elderly and veteran army sergeant, portrayed by Harry Carey. George Raft plays the part of Sergeant Winocki, a tough, embittered aerial gunner who washed out as a pilot.

After the unexpected smash attack on Pearl Harbor, the "Mary Ann" and her crew take off on a desperate flight that takes them to the burning battlefields of Hawaii, Wake Island, Manila, and finally to a crash landing in Australia. Despite constant attack from the enemy, the fighting crew of the B-17 deals out deadly and destructive blows at the Japanese Navy.

"Air Force" marks the close of the Radio Theatre dramas for the Summer months.

This gifted young musician was discovered by Benny Goodman, who told him he was wasting his time in a small-town band, and advised him to join the Glen Miller orchestra which was just then being formed. After four triumphant years with this organization, McIntyre struck out for himself and organized his own band. This has had a meteoric rise to fame. In two recent magazine polls Hal McIntyre was selected as the outstanding bandleader of the year. "The Million Dollar Band" features Barry Wood as its singing emcee, 34 hand-picked instrumentalists, and the Double Daters Quartet.

BAKER AND DONNA DAE

Phil Baker takes a crack at Ellery Queen's "364 question"—who-dunnit—on the slick sleuth's Saturday, July 10, broadcast at 7:30 p. m. over NBC.

The quizmaster of Take It or Leave It will be an armchair detective with Donna Dae, Fred Waring's singer, for Ellery's "Adventure of the Double Triangle". An angry husband comes to Queen with an odd request, in this mystery. He wants protection against himself, to prevent him from killing the unknown man who is stealing his wife.

The problem is to find a wolf in a camel's hair coat. Ellery sets about locating him, and runs into a puzzling case with an exciting twist.

Rudy Vallee left his program for the duration last Thursday, after 14 years of continuous broadcasting. Joan Davis will take over the "general store" with Jack Haley's help during Vallee's absence. The program will continue to be heard Thursday, 9:30 p. m., EWT, via NBC.

Universal Pictures is preparing a short subject starring Bobby Hookey, 5-year-old jitterbug singer. The film will also feature some of the young star's "girl friends," some of whom have appeared as guests on his program. The picture also highlights Bobby as a duck fancier, showing him at play with his eight ducks in his backyard.

Early Sweet Corn Production of County Hard Hit By Borer.

SURVEY SHOWS MANY FIELDS ARE INFESTED

Yield On Some Farms To Be Only 50 Percent Of Normal

PARKS INSPECTS GRAIN Entomologist Confirms Local Agent's Fear Of Big Loss

Pickaway county's early sweet corn has been so hard hit by corn borer infestation that less than half a crop will be harvested in some parts of the county. F. K. Blair, county agent, said Thursday that from all indications most of the sweet corn planted before the period of heavy rains which hit the district in early May is seriously infested.

The county agent pointed out that he had visited numerous fields in the district in which corn borer larva had been observed and that he found damage heavy. Some fields may have to be destroyed in their entirety.

Parks Tours County

Seeking expert information concerning the borer, Mr. Blair called in T. H. Parks, extension entomologist from Ohio State university, who surveyed the Circleville district. The report from Mr. Parks was received Thursday by the county agent, it confirming the farm official's fears that the borer infestation would cause great damage to the county sweet corn yield.

Coming on top of a poor wheat crop, the corn borer infestation proves to be a hard blow to county farmers. Canning factories, too, are expected to suffer although to what extent will not be known for several weeks.

Mr. Parks told Mr. Blair that corn borer and earworms are doing much damage in corn planted early and beginning to put forth tassels.

Late Corn Escaping

"Judging from our experience last year," the state expert said, "the later developing corn will not suffer much and it is only the very earliest sweet corn that is seriously injured. Some infestation in sweet corn from the second generation of larvae may occur in September. Sweet corn which matures in late July and August will probably not be injured."

Mr. Parks said that field corn that was planted early no doubt will have its yield cut somewhat by corn borer.

"I am afraid the day of early planting is over for Pickaway county, just as it has been over for northwestern Ohio for some years," he wrote. "The corn borer is slow getting to Pickaway county, but finally got there, and from now on the growers will have to pay attention to selecting the most resistant hybrids and adjusting the planting date to avoid injury from the insect."

No Need For Panic

"There is no reason for growers to become panicky," Mr. Parks wrote. "They will merely have to adjust their planting date to avoid certain hybrids that are known to be susceptible. It is quite probable that had the rains not interfered the corn borer damage in Pickaway county this year would have been much heavier because of the previous practice of early planting."

Mr. Blair said that farmers of the area have overcome Hessian fly trouble in wheat to a large extent by changing their planting habits over a period of years. "The same thing will have to be done so far as corn is concerned," the county agent pointed out.

has been subject to a lot of twitting from his socialist pals.

The other day a group of them attended a private showing of the Davies film. At the start of the picture, Joe Davies himself looking very dignified, comes on the screen and explains why he sponsored the film, namely because of the importance of understanding Russia. Among other things, he says:

"I am not a Communist. I am a Capitalist."

"When I knew him," whispered Sir Willmott Lewis of the London Times loudly, "he was a lobbyist."

GAS-LESS AUTO RACE

An automobile race was staged in Brazil recently which should interest gas-less Americans. Thirty-two cars took part, and not one of them used a drop of gasoline.

Each car was equipped with a charcoal burning apparatus known as "gasogene," producing a charcoal gas whose combustion takes the place of the combustion of gasoline in the ordinary automobile engine.

These devices have been so successful in Brazil that they are being produced at the rate of forty a day, selling for about $200 each. Some of the units are capable of generating a thousand horsepower, and are used even on the inter-city buses between Santos and Sao Paulo.

Brazil has practically no petroleum resources of her own.

JONES AND LITTLE BUSINESS

Sometime ago, Guy Holcomb, energetic crusader for the little businessman, got an appointment with Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones to urge that he set up in the Commerce Department a bureau to aid little business.

Secretary Jones listened attentively while Holcomb outlined his plan, finally interrupted:

"What are the problems of small business?"

Holcomb looked astonished.

Jones continued: "All small business ever wanted of me was to borrow government money."

"No, they don't want to borrow money," disrupted Holcomb, "they want a square deal. They are not chiselers."

"Well, you get me up a brief on the problems of small business," replied Jones, "and I'll study it." "Mr. Jones," Holcomb answered, "I appreciate your listening to me, but if you don't know by this time as Secretary of Commerce what the problems of small business are, then I haven't got time to educate you. Thanks for the interview and the privilege of meeting you after all these years."

Note: Eventually Jesse did establish a feeble small business division in the Commerce Department. Meanwhile, despite protests from other government bureaus, he has given office space, rent free, to big business concerns to plan their problems after the war.
